Manual on legal mechanisms for reporting gender-based violence and access to free legal aid
Gender based violence is a widespread phenomenon in Kosovo

Gender-based violence is violence directed against a person because of their gender. Both women and men experience gender-based violence but the majority of victims are women and girls. This form of violence among others is an issue around different countries. However, in Kosovo, gender-based violence is mostly widespread in form of domestic violence.
Why violence against women and girls should be fought?

• Strengthens gender and social equality;

• It encourages social and economic development;

• Prevents other forms of discrimination, including discrimination based on disability, age, race, sexual orientation, etc;

• Supports women’s equal access to education, job opportunities, better incomes;

• Improves the well-being of society at large;
New cases of domestic violence have been registered in 2019: 1,700

In Kosovo there are about 80 early marriages - under the age of 16.

Of sexual victims are aged 11 to 16 years: 59%

During 2018, 9,985 babies were born, of which 65 from mothers of non-adulthood.

In the last ten decades in Kosovo 34 women and girls have been murdered by their husbands, fathers, sons or cousins.

Of women reported violence perpetrated by their current partner in the Kosovo Police: 2%

In 2018, 442 cases were reported in Prishtina, 251 in Prizren, 211 in Gjilan. A study conducted by GLPS and partners finds that during the 2017, there were a total of 1,299 cases of domestic violence reported to the Kosovo Police, making domestic violence the most prevalent form of gender-based violence reported in Kosovo. Out of the total, 76.21% of cases reported are by women of different ages with the remaining cases reported by men.
How Kosovo's legal framework defines gender-based violence, and which are the defense mechanisms it offers?

Republic of Kosovo has implemented various laws and other legislative mechanisms in order to tackle gender-based violence, and offer protection to the victims of this kind of violence. Some of the legal mechanisms are explained below:

Law on Gender Equality ‘shall guarantee and promote equality between genders as a basic value of democratic development of society.’

- Article 3.1.12 – Sexual Harassment – Shall mean any form of unwanted verbal, non-verbal, or physical conduct of a sexual nature occurs, with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person, in particular when creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.

- Article 3.1.18 – Violence on the grounds of gender – shall mean acts of violence that result in or are likely to result in, physical, social or economic harm or suffering on the grounds of gender, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life.

- Article 4.2 – Gender based violence is a form of discrimination that seriously inhibits women’s and men’s ability to enjoy rights and freedoms on a basis of equality and is prohibited.

Law on Protection Against Domestic Violence - This law aims to prevent domestic violence, in all its forms, through appropriate legal measures of the family members, that are victims of the domestic violence, by paying special attention to the children, elders and disabled persons.

- Article 2.1.2 – Domestic Violence – one or more intentional acts or omissions when committed by a person against another person with whom he or she has been in domestic relationship.

- Article 2.1.3 – Protected Party – A person subjected to domestic violence and his/her subordinate for whose benefit a protection order, an emergency protection order or temporary emergency order is sought.

Criminal Code of the Republic of Kosovo (Article 248) – Domestic Violence – Whoever commits physical, psychological or economic violence or mistreatment with the intent to violate the dignity of another person within a domestic relationship shall be punished by fine and imprisonment of up to three (3) years.
Where can you report gender-based violence and other forms of violence? What are the mechanisms at place?

Kosovo Police

In the most cases is the first contact for the victim of domestic and gender-based violence. Usually police is called when a case of domestic violence has occurred recently or is unavoidable.

Therefore, the primary task of the police is to protect the victim and investigate the case. Kosovo Police as the first usual responders have an obligation to provide information to the victims, to instruct the victims throughout the process, and inform other stakeholders.

Kosovo Police is responsible under the Law on Protection against Domestic Violence to execute the Protection Order and the Emergency Protection Order, and enforce Emergency Temporary Order.

Shelters for victims of domestic violence

Shelters provide victims with a safe place to live after experiencing domestic violence. Victims may seek help from a shelter directly or they may be referred in shelters by another service provider. Shelters are temporary residences that provide not only protection for the victim but also assist the victim in the process of recovering from domestic violence and rehabilitating and reintegrating the victim into society.

Centers for Social Work

The Center for Social Work is a public institution of municipal level, competent for the protection of citizens in need of social and family services, in this context also the protection and provision of services for victims of domestic violence until reintegration of the victim. It also coordinates the activities with other stakeholders in the process of victim support. The Center for Social Work (CSW) assists victims of domestic violence when social services are needed, protection, rehabilitation and integration of victims into society. Every referred victim is assigned a case manager, who is an official appointed by the CSW to assist in identification and coordination of existing services.
Courts

Courts consider cases of domestic violence with priority. These cases are handled by the court in civil or criminal proceedings depending on the nature of the cases. In rare cases, courts are the first service providers to deal with victims of domestic and gender-based violence. Although the court does not initiate proceedings related to domestic violence cases, the court is not passive in its obligations towards domestic violence cases. Courts have the responsibility of dealing with parties and individuals who appear before them in an impartial, dignified and respectful manner, ensuring adequate protection for all parties involved in the proceedings.

Law on Protection against Domestic Violence enables victims to seek protection orders for acts of domestic violence. Protective orders are filed in the jurisdiction where the victim resides or residence and are issued pursuant to Article 3 of the Law on Protection from Domestic Violence.

To file a protection order victims can seek help from: Victims’ Advocates, CSWs, Legal Aid Offices and various NGOs that provide such services. There is no need to pay court fees for such a claim and victims do not need to hire a lawyer.

A protection order is issued after a hearing and when:

- There is evidence to support a reasonable suspicion that the perpetrator may commit any act of domestic violence;
- Issuance of protection order is necessary to protect safety, health and well-being of the victim.

There are 3 types of Protective Orders, two of them issued by the court. The third order can be obtained outside the court’s working hours.

Protection Order - Is an order issued by a court decision, providing protective measures for the victim. The duration of the protection order may not be longer than 12 months but may be extended for a maximum of 24 months.

Emergency Protection Order - Order issued temporarily by a court decision. The duration of the emergency protection order expires at the end of the hearing to confirm the emergency protection order.

Temporary Emergency Protection Order - Is an order issued out of court working hours by the Chief of the Kosovo Police Regional Unit against Domestic Violence. The duration of the temporary emergency order expires at the end of the following day during which the court is operating.
